EXPERIMENTAL LEARNING
Organized by- Department of English and Sociology

31st March, 2022

Department of English and Sociology jointly organized an activity based on Experimental Learning on 31st March, 2022. In this Experimental Learning 23 Students participated. Students were given the topics of Social problems and they had to express their views on those topics in Marathi language orally. They were instructed to write the same thing in English Language. The aim of this Experiment was to know the ability of students to express their thoughts in Marathi and English Language. In this experiment a good result was found. Many of the students expressed their views orally as well as through writing. We also found that few students orally expressed very well but at the same time they found difficult to express through writings in English due to lack of vocabulary. Also, there were few students who explained their thoughts in writing in English very well but they could not express orally even in Marathi language because of fear and lack of confidence. The faculty members concluded that the vocabulary and self-confidence is important to express the personal views and thoughts on any topic. This experiment helped the students as well as the teachers to know the weak and strong area of the students. The College always conducts such type of activities for the betterment of the students. In future also different type of activities will be conducted.

Thematic Concerns in Twenty First Century Literature :
Migration, Culture & Ethnocentrism

Date : 29 & 30 October 2021

Live Streaming on YouTube

CONCEPT NOTE

Decolonization in the Twentieth Century had brought about notable changes in the economy, ecclesiastical attitude, educational sector, political ideology and recognition of social norms governing a particular society. Scientific advancements and open economies have unlocked doors for migration which in turn has surpassed all the preceding. The run towards well-fortified and seemingly better set-up in towns and cities gave rise to the term urbanization. Some already urban areas flooded with working class across the borders paved for a metropolitan community thus fostering to what is known as Globalization in the 21st Century. Such offshore work culture brought various nationalities on a platform with intermingling of their cultures along with traditions and food habits. Despite the spatial, locution & locational variations and the portrayal of existence of a bond between them, the inter-cultural reciprocation has its own compensations and hindrances. Though the nature of migration as a voluntary or forced one, the concern of alienation, identity crises, rootlessness, cultural conflicts still persists as evident from many of the literary genres.

This E-Conference aims at bringing all the genres of writing under its canopy and invites all associated across disciplines to present their research works on the Thematic Concerns from Historical, Socio- Cultural, Socio Economic perspective.

Organized by- Department of Biotechnology

Date: 28-09-2022

Total No. of Participants: 47

A street play on ‘Contribution of Louis Pasteur in the field of Science’ was organized by the department of Biotechnology and department of Hindi. It was a combined activity organized under innovative methods in teaching and learning. It was performed on the death anniversary of the great scientist Louis Pasteur, marked as ‘World Rabies Day’. The play was of 10-15mins and based on syllabus of B.Sc. Biotechnology Semester I (Paper I –Microbiology) under the topic ‘Contribution of Scientists in the field of Microbiology’. Students performed the play and showed Louis Pasteur’s research work on Rabies vaccine. Through the play students also showed real story of Joseph Meister, a nine year old boy who had been bitten by a rabid dog, and brought to Pasteur. Then by Pasteur’s experimental trials how the boy’s life was saved and Rabies vaccine was invented. The play also showed the orthodox practices and blind belief of the people in practices like black magic, which were proved meaningless and didn’t cure rabies. The street play was performed in Hindi language guided by Hindi teacher, Ms. Manisha Kulkarni. The script was written by combine efforts of Ms. Manisha Kulkarni and the students. Rest of the arrangements of the play and guidance was given by Ms. Anuja Kotia and Ms. Priya Borekar from the department of Biotechnology.

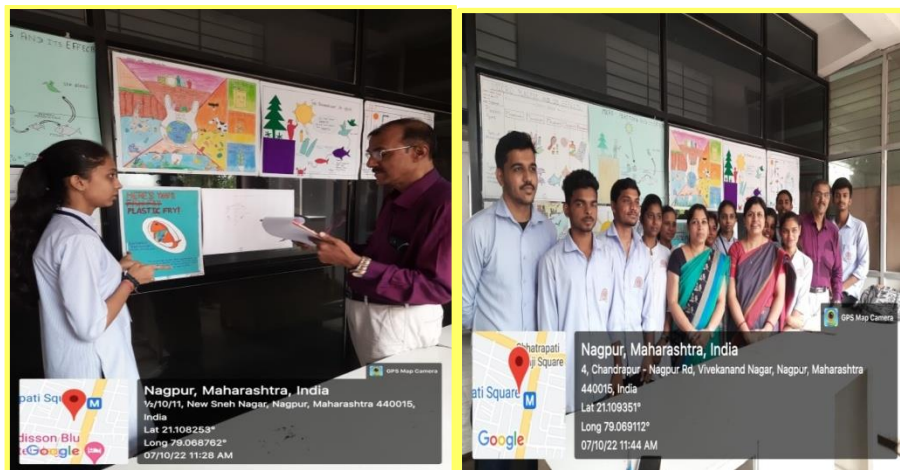

Students got good knowledge of the Rabies vaccine and its invention by Louis Pasteur. The activity was found to be very beneficial in learning the subject topic. Students understood the concepts of vaccine and contribution of Louis Pasteur in the field of Microbiology. The street play also gave the message that diseases get cured by science and its application and not by black magic or orthodox practices. Students developed interest in the subject by participating in this activity. Students found this activity very interesting and helpful in their learning process.

Macromycetes

Macromycetes is a serious but rare fungal infection.

History

In 1854, Kachemmerer described case of mucor mycosis in a child who died after the infection of the skin.

Types of macromycosis and its symptoms:

- 1) Symptoms of rhinocerebral (nasal and brain) mycosis
 - One-sided facial swelling.
 - Headache.
 - Nasal or sinus congestion.
 - Black lesions on nasal bridge or other inside of nose.
 - Fungal hyphae in nasal cavity.
- 2) Symptoms of pulmonary (lungs) macromycosis
 - Chest pain.
 - Cough.
 - Shortness of breath.
 - Continuous (dry) macromycosis can look like the flu.
- 3) Symptoms of gastrointestinal macromycosis in
 - Abdominal pain.
 - Nausea and vomiting.
 - Constitutional bleeding.

How can you prevent it?

Use masks if you are working during construction or in the environment where there are a lot of spores.

Experts advise you to use masks if you are immunosuppressed or if you are taking immunosuppressive drugs.
